The NPAH funding for Western Australia is $12.1 million over four years. This is made up of:

- $3.3 million for new support services
- $3.7 million for capital and for new properties
- $5.1 million to support people at risk of homelessness, including $2.5 million for new support services and new housing support workers for the State, $30.7 million for capital initiatives to lessen the impact of homelessness through improving and expanding specialist models of services, $31.7 million for capital and for new properties, and $53.8 million for new support services.

There are three key strategies of the National Partnership Agreement on Homelessness (NPAH) that underpin provision of programs:

- Early intervention and prevention to avoid people becoming homeless and to reduce the impact of homelessness.
- Ensuring the quality of homelessness by boosting supported accommodation to increase the supply of long-term stable housing through better and more effective interventions.

The following gives an update of the implementation of the programs and details about the agencies that are providing services.

OUTREACH – REMOTE ROUGH SLEEPER ASSERTIVE

This program provides assertive outreach support for rough sleepers in remote areas of Western Australia, including the Goldfields. Workers work in teams of two and provide support to rough sleepers to secure and maintain stable accommodation.

SAFE AT HOME

Workers assess safety and support needs of women and children to stay in their own home and assistance is provided to stabilise accommodation and increase security. Referrals come from domestic violence agencies or other accommodation and support agencies. The services are delivered by:

- Patricia Gilce Centre
- Lucy Law Service
- City of Stirling
- Rush Community Service
- South West Refuges
- Share and Care Community Services

DOMESTIC VIOLENCE OUTREACH SERVICES

Works in rural and remote locations providing support to women and children experiencing domestic violence. The service operates at the time of issuing a Police Order for removal of the perpetrator when the Police officer obtains consent for this victim to release their details in a support service.

FAMILY VIOLENCE REFUGES

For women, men and children experiencing family violence, including children of school age and women and children experiencing domestic violence. Some programs are Indigenous specific and others are for people from culturally and linguistically diverse backgrounds. Engagement and integration with mainstream services is an integral part of all the programs and the development of the initiatives and activities includes: partnerships with other agencies, including schools, child care and health professionals; the Women’s Council for Domestic and Family Violence Services; Anglicare’s Albany Family Violence Services; and Anglicare’s Albany Family Violence Services.

KEEPING KIDS SAFE PROJECT

This program strengthens partnerships for children in domestic violence accommodation service improvements to integrate with mainstream services including schools, child care and health professionals; provides support to children experienced domestic violence; and a Foyer development to provide an: updated, yet independent, accommodation for young people.

IMPLEMENTING THE INITIATIVES

Expressions of interest were called for the delivery of the majority of new services and in some cases a targeted approach was used where an agency had specific expertise that was required to deliver the services.

The service operates at the time of issuing a Police Order for the removal of the perpetrator when the Police officer obtains consent for the victim to release their details in a support service.

The following gives an update of the implementation of the programs and details about the agencies that are delivering the services.

There are three key strategies of the National Partnership Agreement on Homelessness (NPAH) that underpin the programs of the new programs.

- Early intervention and prevention to stop people becoming homeless and keep the impact of homelessness.
- Ensuring the cycle of homelessness by boosting supported accommodation to keep people in long-term stable housing.
- Improving and expanding health and support services to ensure people experiencing homelessness have access to mainstream services.

The NPAH funding for Western Australia is $138 million over four years. This is made up of:

- $33.7 million for capital and land for new properties.
- $31.7 million for support people at risk of homelessness and self-harm.
- $21.5 million for rental, food and social care.
- $16.4 million services to homeless.
- $12.6 million for supporting housing to help people transition to long-term stable housing.
